by; Ryoko Aoki

Ryoko Aoki's (Hyogo, 1973) delicate and fantastic illustrations take inspiration from things around her like plants, dry food, encyclopedia maps, bathroom tiles, flower patterns, dead leaves and old people in the neighborhood and their fashion. Especially for this publication, Aoki assembles her past works similarly to a child playing with toy building blocks. — via:

by: Anja Kirschner

“Anja Kirschner’s drawings present a series of plans for a future film set, dealing with the legendary 18th century criminal Jack Sheppard and his inferred relationship with Daniel Defoe, thought to have been the ghost writer of his ‘autobiography’. The designs combine elements from constructivist theatre design and early 18th century prints, depicting modular components of the set to be constructed during filming, indicating the systemic relationship between workshop and prison cell, bourgeois home and the gallows. ”——

“ Dennis Tyfus (Antwerp, 1979) draws, paints, takes photographs, makes films, plays noise music, sings, parodies, produces gramophone records and CDs, creates books and magazines, has a programme on Radio Centraal, makes collages, and lodges his oeuvre under the Ultra Eczema label. This zine is a selection of images created during a extremely hot “end of the year break” (December 2010/Beginning of January 2011) in Perth, Australia -
